Our Service Feedback

Independence Development Ltd. has been operating therapeutic focused care homes for over 13 years and Edwin Therapeutic Unit has been opened since 2013. During this time, we have had countless success stories, have a look at what some of our stakeholders think of our service.

One Success Story - Four Perspectives

Our Service User

"Since arriving at Edwin I feel cared for and supported, I feel like this is my family and it's my stable home until I turn 18. I like that practitioners have guided me in areas that I needed guidance in and that they did it with a more supportive approach as this helps me to process and understand the meaning of independence."

Adoptive Parents of a Previous Service User

"Our daughter has always been positive since arriving at Edwin Therapeutic Unit, when we have had contact her mood is always good and she is able to communicate so much better with us now. The practitioners have worked hard with her to help improve some areas that she struggled in while being caring and supportive so that she is able to understand that it's in her best interests and that she will benefit long term from these small changes."

The Social Worker of Service User

"The work you have done and are continuing to do with our young person is outstanding, I have never seen her looking so well and positive, she appears to have taken responsibility for her attitude and behaviour and wants to do well. A real shift from the young person I knew a year ago. She was proud of her educational achievements and couldn't wait to show me her certificates. She was very well presented, clean and tidy and her room was the same, and this was an unannounced visit. She actually stated to me she has never been so happy. Thank to you and your team for supporting this amazing transformation"

Feedback from Local Authority

"Our children can be difficult to place due to their complex needs and behaviours, which has seen the Council rely on Independence Development Limited to support for some of the borough's most vulnerable young people. Most children placed in the services managed by Independence Development Limited have thrived and have gone on to achieve independence in their local communities."

Kent County Council Children's Commissioning Team

"Our mission is to transform lives through therapeutic care, helping each individual discover their unique path to independence.."

Our Therapeutic Approach

Our approach to therapeutic care is inspired by the work of John Bowlby & Donald Winnicott - particularly their insights surrounding attachment theory & psychodynamic therapy. Within Edwin Therapeutic Unit, we apply Bowlby's attachment theory by ensuring that all our service users experience a nurturing environment where they can form secure, positive attachments with compassionate caregivers. Our practitioners are also trained in Trauma Informed Practice enabling us to support our service users in their emotional development. This approach not only helps them in healing from past traumas but also in building a resilient foundation for emotional and social growth. Through this lens, we see our role not just as caregivers but as pivotal figures in shaping the developmental progress of the service users we care for.

Psychodynamic therapy forms a critical part of our therapeutic approach at Independence Development Ltd. This form of therapy emphasizes understanding the deep-seated feelings and past experiences that influence current behaviour. Winnicott believed that a nurturing environment is essential for healthy development, and for this reason Edwin Therapeutic Unit has been purposely designed to feel as homely as possible.

Other Key Philosophies & Therapeutic Tools

Trauma Informed Practice

We often receive service users who have experienced trauma at some point, so we use Trauma-Informed Practice which places emphasis on trust, young people's safety, safe environment, peer support, empowerment and sensitivity to facilitate healing.

Containment Theory

Containment Theory dictates that the "container" - usually a key person in the young person's life (in this context IDL practitioners), are able to acknowledge and accept a young person's distress and makes experiences safe for them

CBT

Cognitive Behaviour Therapy is used to explore the relationship between the thoughts, feelings and behaviours of our service users, to make them more aware of their triggers and actions. CBT can result in lower levels of anxiety, "happier" outlook on life and increased self control.

Reflective Practice

It is important that practitioners maintain detailed and accurate information regarding the service users in our care between practitioners and other relevant stakeholders. We do this through regular team meetings focused on our service users.

Referral Process

Step 1: Contact Us

Via telephone, email or filling out form on our website.

Step 2: Visit Us

We'll then organise a tour of the home for you with the homes manager.

Step 3: Suitability

Both parties have the opportunity to decide if home is suitable.
